Mary Page, actress, is accused of the murder of David Pollock, and is defended by her lover, Philip Langdon. Pollock was intoxicated. At Mary's trial she admits she had the revoiver. Her maid textifies that Mary threatened Pollock with it previously, and Mary's leading man implicates Langdon. How Mary disappeared from the scene of the crime is a mystery. With the passing of the acute agony, however, the little things at first submerged came to the surface and became a source of daily martyrdom. The hard bed, the coarse food, the lack of privacy, the limited conveniences, the roughness of the police and the suffocating sense of being a prisoner, of being denied the fresh air and the sunshine and the right to go where she pleased, seemed almost unbearable.
